During the eighteenth century there were important makers of furniture that developed distinctive styles that are identifiable by today's collectors. The Dunlap family of New Hampshire and the Tracy family of Connecticut were both influential in their time and in their region. Many pieces were made in the "Dunlap" style but not necessarily in the Dunlap shop.

This chair is made in the "D.R.DIMES" style and of course by D.R.DIMES. Many contemporary makers also make in this style. Which is to say that D.R.DIMES has substantially influenced the style of the time as only a Master can.
